Carlisle Development Corporation announces the release of Grading Assistant II

January 4, 2015 -- Carlisle Development Corporation has released the Grading Assistant II a next generation software package intended to provide coin grading education.

For 20 years, Carlisle has published the Grading Assistant, an interactive version of the ANA Grading Guide. Grading Assistant II takes a different approach intended to guide the collector towards practical grading endeavors which may be applied to all types of coins, United States and world issues.

It includes images of many US Coin Types at various grades but also provides the user with guidance on finding relevant images for other coins.

An uncirculated coin grading section educates the user on the parameters which affect the assignment of uncirculated grades.

For those coins for which images are provided, graphics overlays highlight the areas to look for and grading text compares the differences to look for between adjacent grades.
